Pjetër (Tal) Krasniqi

(born 30/06/1935, Albanian from Meqe/Meće, Gjakovë/Đakovica municipality, farmer, eight children)

Pjetër had retired, after working at the Erenik juice factory in Gjakovë/Đakovica as a security guard. He lived in Meqe/Meće with his wife Gjyste and their three sons, one of whom was married and had a son. When Serb forces attacked the village on the morning of 2 August 1998, the first shells began falling on the periphery of the village, and Pjetër's family ran to the woods between the villages of Cërmjan/Crmljane and Meqe/Meće. Pjetër had told them he would catch up with them later. That was the last time they saw him alive. That evening, their cousin Mark Krasniqi told them that Pjetër had been killed in the yard [Meqe/Meće] and that Serb forces had taken away his body and buried it at the cemetery in Gjakovë/Đakovica. Pjetër's family transferred his body on 20 September 1998 to the cemetery in Doblibarë/Doblibare. On 2 August 2006, his mortal remains were transferred to Meqe/Meće.

Nekë (Halit) Pajaziti

(born 25/04/1942, Albanian from Dobrosh/Dobroš, Gjakovë/Đakovica municipality, farmer, six children)

When, at the end of July 1998, Serb forces surrounded the village of Dobrosh/Dobroš, Nekë, who lived there with his wife Zelfije, and their sons and daughters, took his family to Gjakovë/Đakovica and accommodated them with the Saneja family. Later that day, he went back to Dobrosh/Dobroš to get some things. He never came back. On 5 August 1998, a relative, Nushë Pajaziti, said that she had heard from her relative Qerim that Serb forces had killed Nekë on 2 August 1998 in Mejë/Meja. Zelfije immediately left for Gjakovë/Đakovica and found out at the Čabrat public funeral company that Nekë was buried at the town cemetery in Gjakovë/Đakovica. A worker showed her Nekë's grave. The Pajazitis transferred Nekë's remains to the Dobrosh/Dobroš cemetery in 2000.

Ukë (Tahir) Rexha

(born 1920, Albanian from Nivokaz, Gjakovë/Đakovica municipality, farmer, two children)

The aged Ukë lived in Nivokaz with his wife Nurije, son Brahim, daughter-in-law Ruke and nine grandchildren. On 2 August 1998, around 17:00h, some 30-old Serb policemen stormed their house and ordered them all out. Ukë refused to leave his home. Other family members left the house and went to the nearby village of Skivjan/Skivjane. After that, they never saw him alive again. When, ten days later, Nurije returned to Nivokaz with her granddaughter Rukmone to see how Ukë was doing, she found parts of Ukë's clothes in the yard and Ukë's body on a nearby meadow. He had no clothes on and was covered with bruises. With the help of Adem Osmani, Nurije buried Ukë on 13 August 1998 at the Nivokaz cemetery.
